Acute ischemia of the thumb caused by radial artery cannulation. Once diagnosed, the first treatment is the removal of the arterial line; after compression, ischemia should recede in less than a few hours; otherwise, urgent surgical consultation becomes mandatory. The left picture shows ischemia of the thumb after radial artery cannulation. The circulation to the thumb was restored after removal of the cannula (right picture).